Ask Dr. Beals...

Q: I think the time has come for me to have a brow lift, but I'm concerned about the large scalp incision, numbness and loss of hair that I've read about.

A: Although some surgeons still use the open approach, I perform brow lifts with an endoscopic approach, which requires only 3 or 4 very small incisions above the hairline. It has a much shorter recovery time, and does not result in a pulled, higher forehead or give one a "surprised" look. I have never had a patient remark about loss of hair. Most patients experience some temporary numbness along the hairline and typically this subsides within 2 to 3 weeks. The endoscopic approach gently lifts the brows to their normal position without affecting blinking, closing of the eyes, or the hairline.

Office Update

Allison joined our team in June as Service Coordinator. She has previously worked in a Plastic Surgery practice in Florida and is also a Licensed Aesthetician. When away from work, Allison enjoys spending time with her husband and miniature pinscher. She also enjoys cooking, baking, photography and painting. Her background, experience, and desire to assist patients have helped her blend into our office as a valued team member. You will enjoy meeting her when you call or visit our office!
